ALCOHOL CAUSES MAN'S END

Hartville Harness Maker Takes Fatal Dose, Dying in Agony

CORONER MARCH CALLED

Mistaking wood alcohol for another brand, Charles Hunter, aged 50, took a fatal drink at Hartville Tuesday, dying in awful agony a short time afterward.

For some time, Hunter and others have been smuggling drink into Hartville, which is a dry township. With the aid of this Hunter has been under the influence for some time.

Tuesday he smuggled some into the harness shop where he had been working for a short time. He was just recovering from a bad case and wanted to sober up.

"This is my last drink, boys," he remarked, as he took a large swallow of the diluted alcohol.

A few minutes later he fell on the floor of the harness shop, writhing in agony. A physician was summoned, but could not save Hunter's life.

Coroner Harry March of Canton was summoned and pronounced the case one of death by accident.

Hunter was a native of England and went to Hartville last December from Alliance, where he formerly resided.

So far as is known he has no relatives in this country.

His body will be laid away in the potter's field.

SECOND CUSS IN PUBLIC MEANS A CELL

First Time Policeman Hands You a Card which Requests You Not to Do It Again.

Mason City, Ia., July 26.—Policemen as conversation censors is the novel position in which the bluecoats of this city now find themselves.

This is the result of Dr. W. W. Carlton's work on the police force. The preacher told the mayor that there was entirely too much swearing on the streets.

Cards have been printed which contain a brief synopsis of the city ordinance against swearing.

These are in the possession of the police, and when a man is heard to swear he is handed a card. At the second offense he is arrested.

Three have been arrested already.
